Tamales with a handmade love story!

NEW PRODUCTS

Sherry grew up in a loving, loud and large Mexican-American family that handed down the family tamale recipe and tamalada (tamale-making party) tradition. In Sherry's family home, this traditional event always included laughter, teasing, storytelling, kids running around playing and laughing — and of course lots of tamales to share.

Todd's first tamale-making experience started in Sherry's family home with 5 bushels of corn, 25 pounds of freshly roasted green chilies, and 18 friends and family. He learned that day that people always count tamales by the dozen. After a 10-hour day of making tamales, he was in love. He was already in love with Sherry, and now, he was in love with making tamales. In early 2008 Todd left his executive position at a Fortune 500 company to make tamales full time.
